

SECRETARY ASKS FOR MORE STRINGENT LAWS ON THE SUBJECT.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—More stringent laws to prevent the smuggling of opium into the United States along its borders is urged by the secretary of the treasury in his annual report, made to congress today. He also says the government is rigidly investigating treasury frauds and suggests the revision of tariffs in a scientific manner to do away with much of the court interpretation now necessary. He also wants the law amended so that returning tourists will have more liberty in the classes of articles they may select to include under the $100 "free" which the tariff exempts from duty for all returning Americans. All of these are questions of much interest along the border and at El Paso.

REYISTAS CLAIM IT IS MANUFACTURED STORY TO GET SYMPATHY FOR PRESIDENT.

Mexico City, Mexico, Dec. 18.—Supporters of Gen. Bernardo Reyes declare that the alleged conspiracy to murder president Madero and establish Gen. Reyes as provisional president under a military rule, was cooked up by supporters of Madero to excite sympathy for the president, distrust his inability to restore peace to the country, put him in position to execute his opponents and give him a chance to violently strong to warrant the execution of Reyes if captured in Mexico or for the extradition of the general if he is arrested again in the United States. The Reyistas point to the constitutional requirement that the president would succeed to the presidency in event of the assassination of Madero and cite this as proof that even if Madero were killed it could not result in Reyes gaining the presidency any easier than he could do now.

Two propositions were laid before the committee. The first was that the president should officially proclaim the abrogation with ratification of his action by the senate. ALL CARS COMING DOWN BOULEVARD MAY BE TURNED INTO STANTON, TO MILLS.

The Stanton street loop for the Boulevard, Fort Mills, Highland Park and Government Hill street cars will be definitely decided upon before Thursday of this week, if the Stanton street property owners can raise the dust.

UP MILLS STREET; THEN TO THE PLAZA

The proposed change in the traffic arrangement of the north side cars is to have the cars which now come down Boulevard from Highland Park, Government Hill and Fort Hill, and on to the Stanton street station, switched to the proposed new Stanton street car line and run from Boulevard to Mills street and come into the transfer station from the east. By this arrangement the inward bound cars will come into the transfer station on a loop, and those advocating the change say the congestion on Oregon street caused by the arrival of the north side cars, including the spelt Arizona and Sunset Heights cars, will be largely eliminated.
