It has been, of course, long known that temperature decreases rapidly with height, namely, at the rate of 1 degree Fahrenheit for every 300 feet. It is now well established that in the lower two miles this is frequently reversed, a fact previously thought exceptional.

But from this height up, as shown by the closely-set parallel lines of the model, there is great and constant regularity. Formerly it was supposed that this contiqued unbroken until the celd space was reached, pre sumably somewhere near absolute zero, or minus 273 degrees C. No oue dreamt of any serious divergence.

When, however, the sounding balloon records began to accumulate one of the most obvious facts obtained was that at a height usually of about six miles temperature ceased to fall, and, on the contrary, tended again to rise, and that this unicoked-for reversal, so extraordinary

With him was Jesus Mendoon, Manuel Mendoza and C. Macias. It is thought by the department of justice officers that these men were also recruited at the El Paso Junta, but no papers were found on them. On a later train Catarino Yelma and Jose M. Garcia went to Fabens carrying four rifles, 280 rounds of ammunition, two canvas ammunition bags and other munitions. A complaint of aftempting to smuggle ammunition to Mexico was made out against these men while the others were charged with enlisting and conspiracy to enlist on this side for service in Mexico.

Malias C. Garcia, thought to be the head of the Junta, was arrested Saturday morning when he drove to Fabens with Mrs. Toribio Ottega, wife of the rebel commander. They make the trip in an automobile and Mrs. Ortega was permitted to cross to her hisband's camp at Guadalupe, after her escort was arrested by the United States soldiers.
